COMPANY OVERVIEW	PRODUCTS	PRICING
Clover is a cloud-based point-of-sale (POS) software, hardware, and payment processing company. They are owned by Fiserv.	Software Plans: • Clover Counter Service Restaurant • Clover Table Service Restaurant Additional Modules: • KDS • Clover Online Ordering (free) • BentoBox partnership Hardware: • Clover Station • Clover Flex • Clover Mini	$60-80 per month + $9.95 per additional device.

COMPETITOR STRENGTHS
• Great hardware and reliable payments. • Brand recognition. • Owned by a Fortune 500 company (Fiserv). • Low payment processing rates, depending on the sales channel purchased through. • Low software prices (relative to Toast). • Extensive reseller network.

HOW TO ADDRESS THEM
Hardware • SkyTab hardware is more affordable and just as good (if not better) of a form factor. • SkyTab is owned by Shift4 and has the experience of all our legacy POS brands. • Point to the fact that a third of restaurants in North America use Shift4. Features & Benefits • SkyTab is more feature rich and purpose-built for restaurants. • Lower cost of ownership over the long run; especially with hardware included in the cost.

COMPETITOR WEAKNESSES
• Products are not mature or tailored for sophisticated restaurants. • App market model results in high prices. • High cost for hardware, depending on the sales channel purchased through. • Highly variable processing rates. • Minimal innovation.

HOW TO ADDRESS THEM
Innovation • SkyTab is built exclusively for restaurants, whereas Clover is a “one-size-fits-all” product used by restaurants, barber shops, retailers, etc. • Clover is slow to innovate in the restaurant space. SkyTab regularly releases updates with new features. Pricing • Clover boasts a low price, but total cost is higher because you have to pay for additional products through their app market. • Clover hardware is very expensive (unless it's being subsidized by a reseller, in which case the processing rates may be high). • Extensive reseller network means some merchants may be on high rate schedules – look for that! • Point to new features.
